

This book offers a personal account of scholars in philosophy and education with whom I have had the good fortune to interact during the course of my half century at Harvard University and elsewhere. My aim in writing this account is threefold: first, to recapture for myself the pleasure of their memorable company for its own sake, secondly, to have occasion to reflect on the educational impact of their teaching, and, finally, to counteract the prevalent amnesia of universities by recalling the conduct of scholars of past generations who still have things to teach us. I owe thanks to many people who have helped me in this endeavor. Professor Harvey Siegel, Dr. Stefania Jha, and Dr. Rosalind Scheffer read initial versions of the manuscript and gave me the benefit of their criticisms, as did the publishers anonymous readers. JoAnne Sorabella and Stefania Jha listened to my readings of a number of these chapters, and JoAnne Sorabella produced several typescripts of the whole with her usual matchless proficiency. I presented some portions of the manuscript to the Philosophy of Education Research Center at Harvard and profited from these occasions. After I joined the Mandel Center at Brandeis University in the Fall of 2003, Avital Feuer assisted me ably in readying the final version of the book. And I am grateful to Laurie Scheffer for her meticulous help with proofreading.
