

After 17 years David Bullard is still South Africa's most talked-about columnist, with three bestselling books to his name. This, his fourth and final collection of his columns, covers what he calls his Golden Age following his spectacular sacking from the Sunday Times in 2008. With a pen dripping deadly venom, Swiftian savagery and the blackest humour, Bullard mercilessly ridicules the smug, the sanctimonious, the politically correct, the incompetent, the venal and the just plain idiotic.
